September 11. And by a curious coincidence, there was an Edison Exhibit at the Fair which featured the introduction of the Edison Perfected Phonograph into Canada. (This machine was electrically driven, and is known generally as a Class M. It may be seen on page xvi of Edison Cylinder Records, 1889-1912.) A written speech of Lord Stanley's, delivered on September 10, 1888 in response to a welcome by the City of Toronto bears a striking resemblance to the wax recording. Unfortunately, a newspaper story in the Toronto Globe for September 13, 1888, does not specifically mention that Stanley made a recording at the Exhibit. If it had, that would certainly be the clinching argument. The evidence, however, is so strong, even without it, that it seems quite likely that the recording is indeed that of Lord F. A. Stanley, a man whose name is better known to Americans as the founder of the Stanley Cup in hockey.

But error has a long life, and the recording also turned up recently in the Edison release of a flexible historical LP (APM, Feb. 1973, p. 5) which identified this same recording as Henry M. Stanley, and stated that it was made between 1890 and

DEAR APM:

Question: Why are some Victor talking machine cabinets of different size, even for the same model?

L. M., Sarasota, Fla.

Answer: In general, the Victor outside horn machines seem to grow in size over the years. The dimensions increase about $\frac{1}{2}$ " to 3/4" longer over the period 1903 - 1913, and it is possible to date the machine with enough data.

Question: How rare is the Edison Concert (5") Phonograph?

B. W., Hampton, N.H.

Answer: Fairly rare. The drawer type model reached a production figure of just over 3000 by May of 1900. This is a low figure compared to other Edison models, but may be about equal to the Edison Opera Phonograph.

1892. It is true that Henry Stanley visited the Edison Labs in 1890 and made a record (See A. O. Tate's Edison's Open Door, p. 164) but this cylinder has not survived, and the occasion was not correct to be welcoming someone to Canada. An undated reference in the June 1974 issue of The Hillandale News, p. 197, quoting The Talking Machine News of many years earlier, made it even more complicated by stating that Henry M. Stanley had made a recording at a Lord Mayor's reception honoring his recent return from the Expedition that rescued Dr. Livingston. Since Stanley had found Livingston in 1871, this isn't possible. The only authentic recording of the famous explorer, who had fought on both sides of the American Civil War, is that of May 13, 1890.

If only Henry Morton Stanley had kept his original name of John Rowlands and not changed it to that of his adoptive father, the confusion would never have occurred. Despite the fact that the original recording of Lord Stanley has mysteriously disappeared it seems likely that the re-recording dates from September 11, 1888, and hence may be classified as the world's oldest known surviving record.

DOES ANYBODY HAVE A FLETCHER?

Ray Wile

Much of the history of the phonograph may be found buried in court files hidden in various locations throughout the United States. This researcher, for example, has found information that he once felt was irretrievably lost. A recent discovery provided translations of notebooks once kept by a Dr. Schulze-Berge, the scientist that Edison entrusted with his early molding experiments.

Both the American Graphophone Company and the Edison Companies kept large groups of lawyers engaged in continuous suits and countersuits. The issues were important in that they involved the ultimate control of the industry. Oftentimes, a suit would be instituted solely in order to clothe a patent with the sanction of a court test. Such a suit was that brought by Edison against Elmer Fletcher.

Fletcher had developed several modifications of the basic Edison Automatic Speaker that he felt greatly improved the reproduction, especially in the cross-head tension. He began a mail-order business in which a customer could send in a reproducer for these modifications. Soon Douglas & Co., a local New York dealer, became involved and Fletcher began to buy up quantities of used reproducers (and even recorders!) for the purpose of modification and eventual sale. After about 1500 "Fletcherized" reproducers were sold, the Edison lawyers stepped in and instituted suit (Bill of Complaint, May 3, 1901). Fletcher had very little defense and a judgment was soon brought against him by the courts, in June 1902. There was little that could be recovered from the defendant, but the case did establish the validity of the Edison reproducer patent, and the case was later used in similar circumstances. The defendant could not substantially alter a patented device and compete with and re-sell it as his own, and Edison was entitled to sell his product in confidence that his customers would receive what he himself had intended.

A detailed cross-section diagram illustrates the Fletcher modifications (on front cover) as opposed to a conventional Edison reproducer. The modified reproducer carried the words "The Fletcher" inscribed on the tube plate. It would be interesting to discover if any of the readers of APM have one of these rare "Fletchers" in their possession. Incidentally Fletcher disappeared into the mists of history when he moved to the Midwest soon after the trial and judgment, and was soon as difficult to locate as one of his reproducers.

I wish to thank the Edison National Historic Site for the kindness in allowing copies to be made of this rare case.

WORLD'S OLDEST RECORD IDENTIFIED?

For some time now, it has been thought that the world's oldest surviving record was the Edison (white) wax cylinder of Sir Arthur Sullivan (of Gilbert and Sullivan fame). This recording was made in England on October 5, 1888 and miraculously survived to the modern era, whereupon it was re-recorded and issued on various LP's, among which were Gotham's History Speaks and the Edison Foundation's The Sound of Fame. It seemed unlikely that anything earlier could be located.

But Leo Laclare of the Historical Sound Recordings Department of the Public Archives of Canada (Recorded Sound, April-July 1973, p. 198), was puzzled by a recording he heard on a two-record LP recording released by Argo in England a couple of years ago (ZPR/122-123). The voice was identified as Lord Stanley, and the date given for the same voice (listed as Henry M. Stanley on Rococo, album 4001), was 1888. Basically, the speaker addressed himself to the President and people of the United States, in extending a warm welcome from the people of Canada. Mr. Laclare wondered how Henry Morton Stanley, the famous explorer, was authorized to speak for the Dominion of Canada, and did some further checking. First of all, Henry Stanley could not have been in Canada in 1888, for as a matter of fact, he was in Africa from January 1887 to December 1889. A catalog card at the Edison National Historic Site describes the cylinder as "Lord (Henry M.) Stanley, 1888? Probably 1890 as it was then he made his trip to this country (USA)." Thus, even many years ago when the curators at the Site filled out the card, they themselves were suspicious of the 1888 date. But the problem goes deeper, as Laclare was able to establish that Henry M. Stanley, discoverer of Livingston though he was, had never received the title of Lord! Who then is on the cylinder?

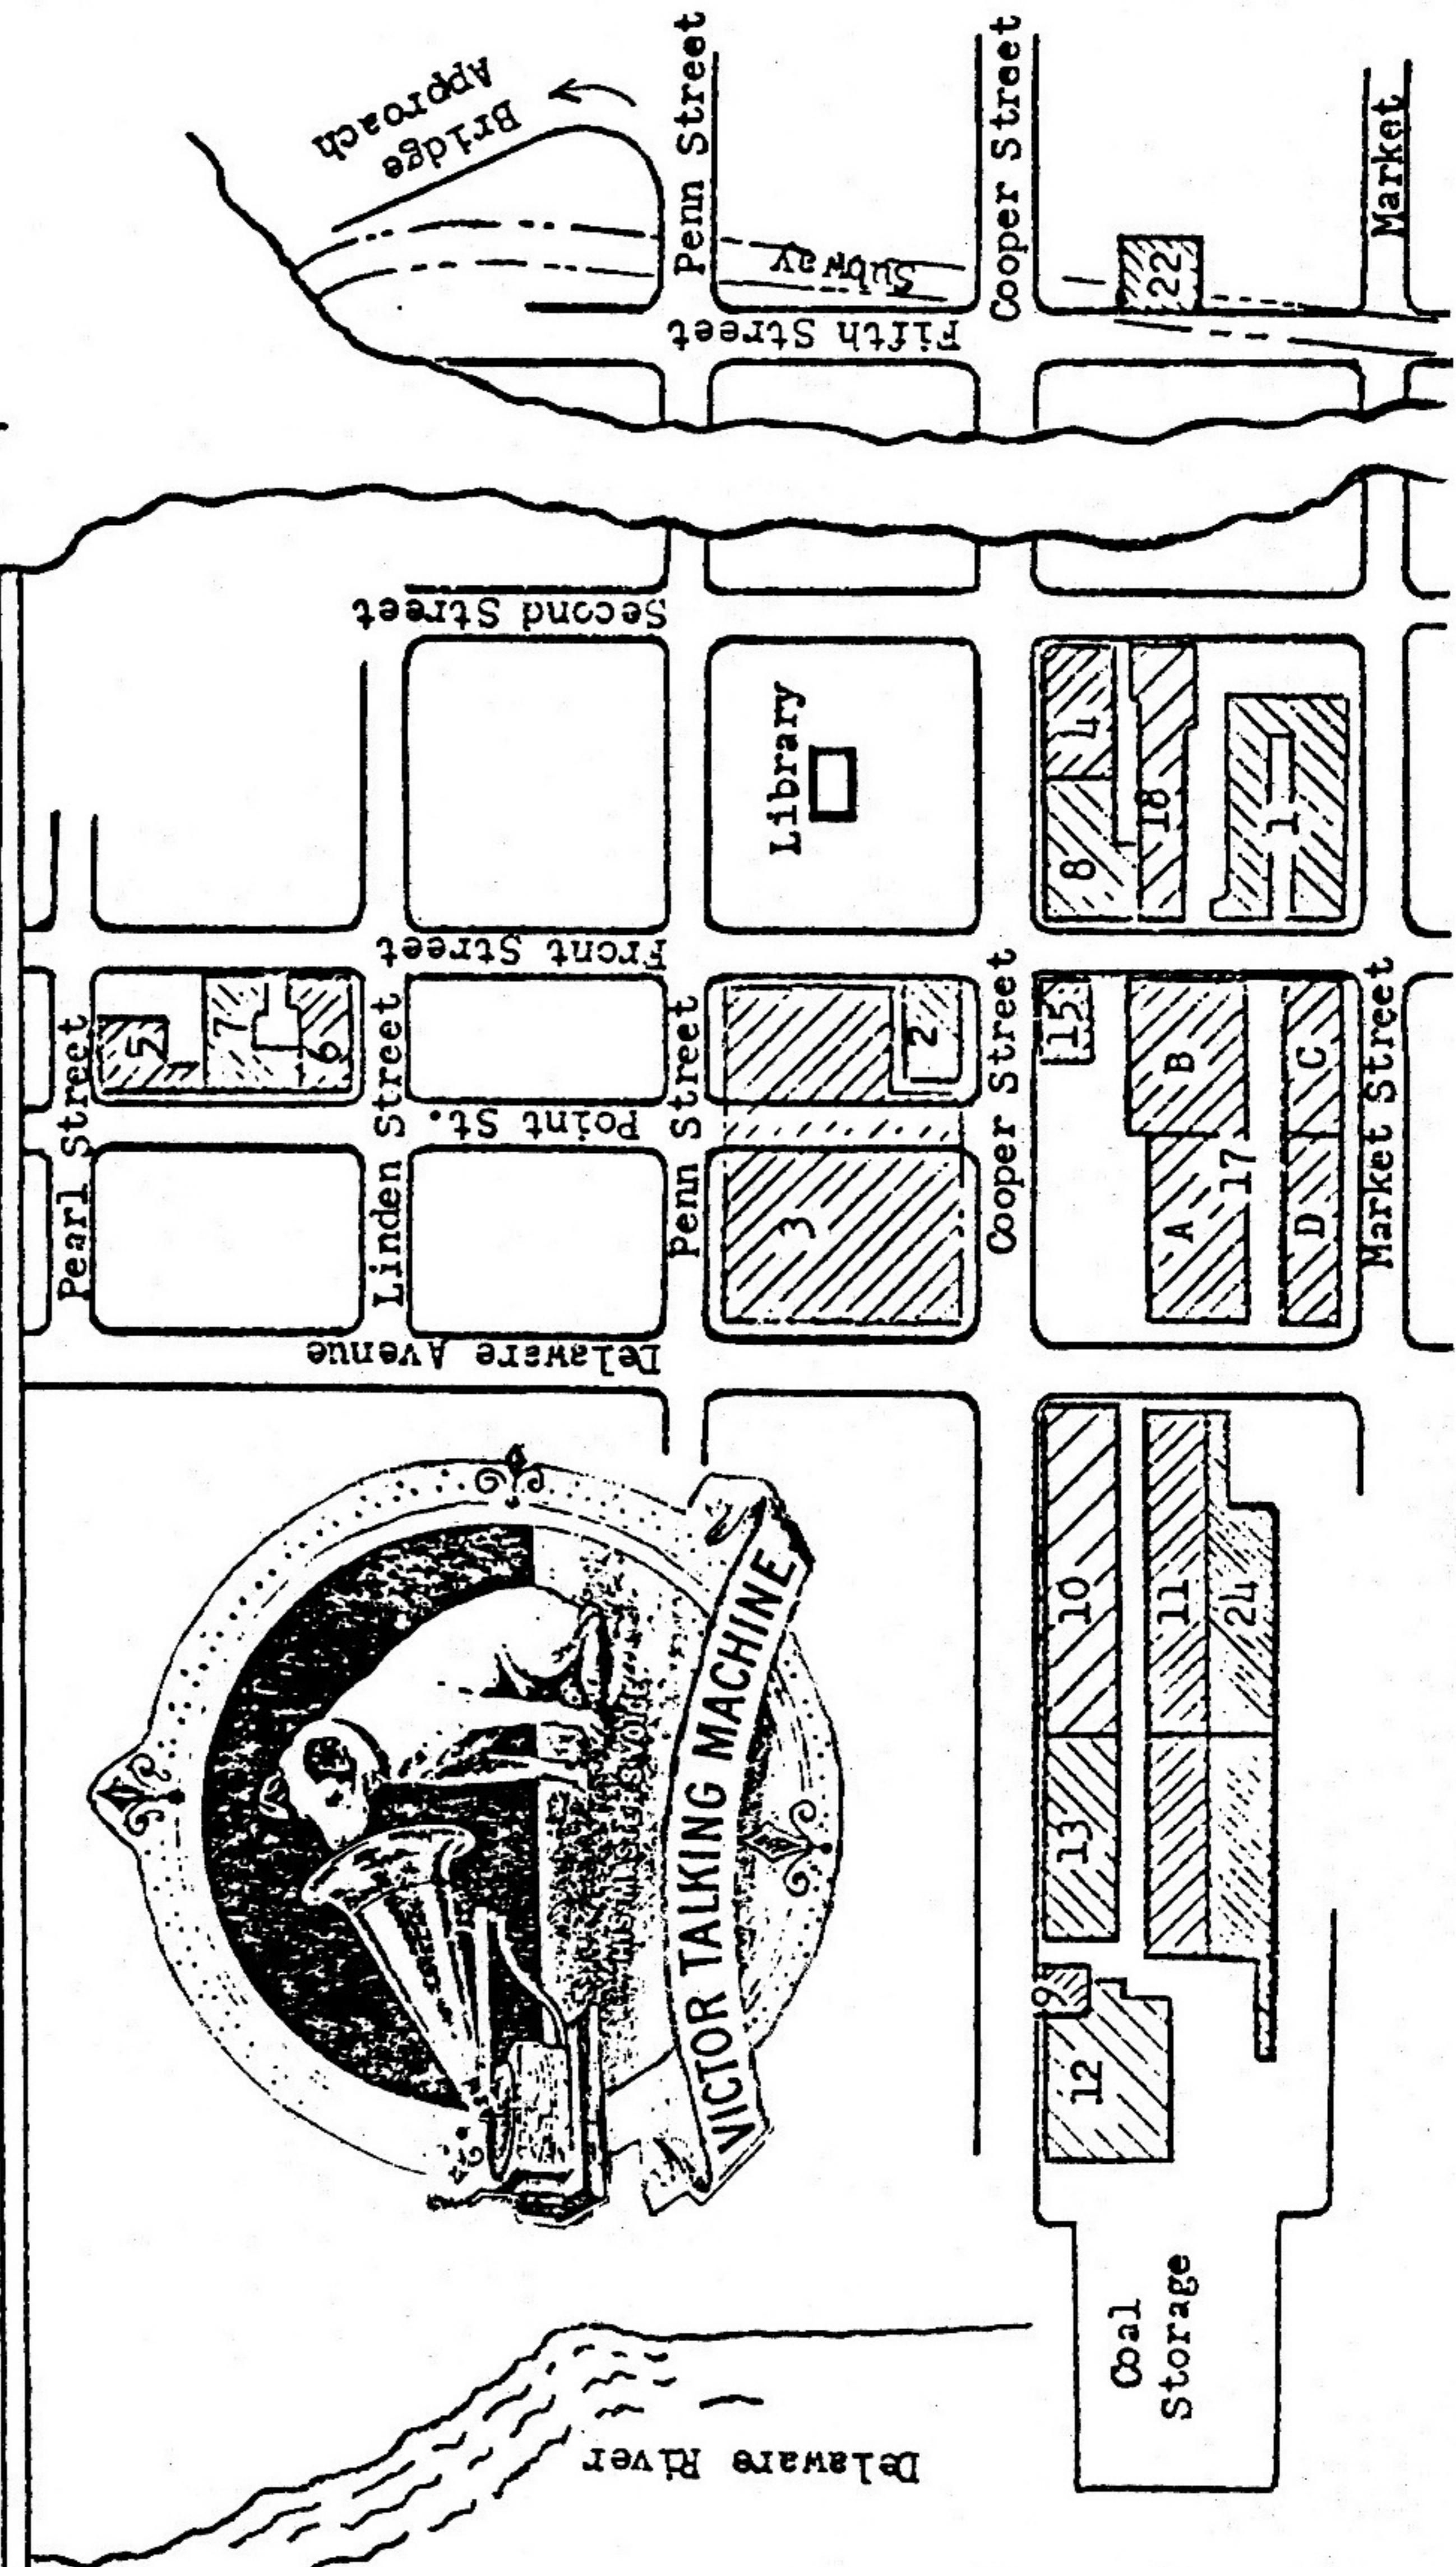

A more likely candidate is Frederick A. Stanley, sworn in as Governor-General of Canada on June 11, 1888, and who held the title of Lord since 1886. This identification is strengthened in several ways. First, the voice on the recording is direct and distinct, and could be compared to a recording held by the BBC Archives in England. The BBC recording was made May 13, 1890 and the speaker identifies himself as Henry M. Stanley. The accents and pronunciations of the two speakers differ greatly and they are clearly not the same man. Second, there was an occasion in 1888, when it would have been appropriate for Lord Frederick Stanley to address the President of the United States. This was the year in which the Toronto Industrial Exhibition opened and Frederick Stanley presided at the ceremonies, held on

BOOK REVIEW

Rather than review one particular book this month, we thought we would like to cover several items that didn't fit into a review of their own. For starters, as we mentioned last month, the Edison National Historic Site has re-issued a series of full-color posters that are a glory to behold. The first one is the largest, measuring about 17" by 24", and shows the famous couple listening to an Edison phonograph. This was photographed directly from an original Edison advertising poster which was distributed to all Edison dealers around 1905 or 1906. The colors are quite close to the original, and it will be welcomed by the many collectors who in the past have asked APM to issue it. It is rumored that Edison paid over $1000. for the painting by Massani, so the present poster is a real bargain!

The Edison Site has also issued four other color posters each measuring 11" by 13". These were taken from dealers' display posters and one of them, showing the Gem phonograph, appeared on the cover of the May issue of APM. The others show Uncle Sam behind the early indented-panel Triumph, a small boy attacking the new-style Standard, and a brass band in uniform marching out of a phonograph horn. If anything, the colors are more vivid than the originals and it is clear that these were among the finest posters of their type ever issued by Edison. Those more familiar with Victor advertising history will be surprised at the quality of the graphics and designs. The four posters appear to date from mid-1902, and were apparently intended to "push" the new-style Edison cabinets, machines, C reproducers and gold-moulded cylinders. They are all printed on good heavy stock and are very suitable for framing. The prices listed by the Site are so modest and the glowing colors so attractive, that most collectors will want them. The single large poster of the old couple is $1.25 plus 50¢ for a sturdy mailing tube. Each of the smaller posters when ordered singly is $1.25 apiece postpaid. But if all five color posters are ordered at the same time, the combined price is $5.75 postpaid. It is certainly safe to say that these are the finest color posters ever produced for the phonograph hobbyist. Readers may write to the Edison National Historic Site P. O. Box 126, Orange, N. J. 07051, and make checks or money-orders payable to a tongue-twister: The Eastern National Park and Monument Association. Envelopes can be marked "Attention Mrs. Leah Burt" for prompt attention. If the response is warm, the Site plans to issue other early Edison memorabilia at reasonable prices, and will continue to fill orders while supplies last.

An enterprising Canadian, who is a Pathe buff, was quite fortunate in locating recently 10 unusual postcards showing several models of Pathe cylinder phonographs. Jean-Paul Agnard was antiquing in Paris and found what seems to be a complete set of character cards, each showing a person from a different occupation (gendarme, priest, dancer, explorer, etc.) listening to the witty verses of the French version of the Graphophone. The cards are reproduced in half-tone, soft black and white and still have the original numbering system. The reverses of the cards are exactly like the postcards of the 1900 period, and could even be mailed today. The cost for the complete set is $5.00 postpaid and the cards may be arranged in a frame. (Each measures 3½" by 5½"). There are only 2 or three different machines pictured altogether, with trumpet and cygnet horns, but the designs are quite attractive for any collector. Checks may be sent to Jean-Paul Agnard, 8635 Avenue Prevert, Charlesbourg, Quebec 7, Canada. If you are interested in Pathe machines as well, Mr. Agnard will be pleased to correspond with you.
